

In the early 1970's, a mysterious transmission appeared on television sets across the country of Japan. It was a strange, violent, oddly beautiful series of images, in which a near-endless succession of bizarre creatures did battle with a "hero," his body covered in red. They fought on a desolate world of dead grass and fog-shrouded woods, occasionally peppered with artifacts not unlike those seen on Earth.

Many assumed it to be a weird television program for children, and it eventually faded from memory. The viewers could never have imagined that these images may have been from a reality that was not their own...and that they were not the intended audience...
