

Everyone believes they're so goddamn special.

Every day, they're bombarded with the threat of death-- mass shootings, freak accidents, cancer, killer bugs.

And still, they feel safe--exempt from the awful realities that fall on other people.

They say to themselves, "not my town, not my school, not me."

So, what happens when the whole damn world shares this point of view?